PART 7 – CONGRESS UPDATE (Rev Dr Chris Budden and Rev Dennis Corowa)

Rev Dennis Corowa acknowledged the traditional owners of this land past, present and future. He advised that the review of the report was taken to the National Executive. In its discussions, one of the tensions is that the Uniting Aboriginal and Island Christian Congress are torn between being a part of the Uniting Church and the struggles of aboriginal people. He stated that it is not always an easy thing looking after our own people and the staff of the Uniting Church. He said that they do not have the experience or range of skills to run their own Presbytery. The National Executive of Congress voiced that there should be a postponement of the establishment of a Presbytery. Dennis outlined some of the ways that Congress can be supported in governance. He said that they were facing many changes across the Church. These were hard choices for his people and they were asked to tick many boxes. He has been working with the Queensland Presbytery to train for all the extra work that has to be done for a new presbytery. We have come through a time for freedom for aboriginal people. We now need to progress to working and doing things together in a formal way.

Rev Dr Chris Budden advised that they are committed to allowing aboriginal people to control their own lives, to build relationships. He said that in the NSW/ACT Synod they have worked really hard to make sure that Congress Chair sits with the moderator, that they welcome guests, that First Peoples are in the centre of our lives. He said that people in the Synod and Congress are deeply committed to ensuring that Congress works.

Des Lawson of Western Australian congress said that they are struggling, that they've faced the issues and it's time to move on. He said they need the help but the reality of ministry depends on God. Lastly, he noted that Congress sits at the back and does not always feel fully respected. He said that it is a respect thing; acknowledgement and respect goes a long way.

NEXT MEETING

The Annual Synod meeting will be held from Friday 9 until Sunday 11 September 2016 at Scotch College.

CLOSE OF MEETING

The Moderator extended his thanks to the Billabong Uniting Church congregation for their effort and hospitality and to staff and volunteers who assisted with the smooth running of the meeting.
